

Questions to Consider

Instead of an iconic dish, Seattle boasts iconic ingredients—do you agree?

---

---

If you were to pick one food that represents Seattle, which one would you nominate and why?

---

---

---

What is your favorite Seattle food innovation?
Draw/describe it below:

Seattle's food is a result of its geography, diversity, economy, and collaboration among people and professions. Can you find artifacts that support this argument?

Can you find all of these mushrooms?

The poster features a dark brown background with white line-art illustrations of various food items: a fish, oysters, a crab, mushrooms, and berries. A central white circle contains the title and subtitle. The MOHAI logo is prominently displayed in the lower half.

Raw Ingredients

- 1 Identify two foods you like to eat and find evidence that tells you where they come from or how they're gathered.

---

---

---

---

- 2 Can you find the tool used to build boxes like the one this berry picker is holding?

Process and Prep

- 3 If you were to start a restaurant that serves only one thing, what would it be?

What tools/resources would you need to create the perfect recipe and open up shop?

---

---

To Market, to Market

- 4 How was Pike Place Market impacted by Japanese internment?

- 5 How could people participate in the Save the Market campaign? Why might people have wanted to save Pike Place Market?

---

---

Bringing it Home

- 6 Where did this mushroom come from? Discuss: Why might chefs want to serve foraged food in restaurants? What might be some challenges of doing so?

---

---

---

- 7 How does the Beacon Food Forest address hunger in the community?

---

---

---

Cooking Tech-niques

- 8 Find these knives. What out of this world ingredient does Bob Kramer mix into some of his knives?

- 9 In what ways is cooking a science? List two pieces of evidence that you see in this section.

---

---

---

Serving it Up

- 10 Can you spot these creative restaurant decorations?

- 11 What's important when designing the look and feel of a restaurant?

---

---

Some Seattle chefs believe in serving traditional, locally-sourced foods, while others serve dishes made with high tech tools and global ingredients. Discuss: Which do you prefer and why?
