

Quaranzine Craft – July Check-in

In April we shared instructions and prompts for making a simple one-page quarantine zine (“quaranzine”) to reflect on life during the coronavirus pandemic. Things have changed a lot since then! We’ve been going through this for a few months now, school is out, and the world outside feels different as summer arrives and businesses begin to partially re-open.

Here are some new prompts for a July quaranzine! All you need is a rectangular piece of paper, scissors, and drawing/writing/collaging supplies of your choice. Below are some reminder photos of how to make a simple book. More detailed instructions and the original prompts can be found on the MOHAI website at <https://mohai.org/quaranzine/>. Share your zine with us on Instagram @mohaiseattle!

Summer Prompts

This one-sheet book has 6 interior pages plus a front and back cover. You can reflect on one of the following prompts per page or even make a whole zine with just one of the prompts. Draw, write, make a comic, collage, and more – it’s your choice!

- Time – how are you spending it these days?
- Care – how have you given or received care or help during this time?
- Lessons – what is something you’ve learned?
- Changes – what’s different compared to when this first started?
- Summer – what are some signs of the new season?
- Phases – how do the partial re-openings make you feel?
